WHAT IS STREET LEVEL STU

Street Level Ministries is a UW-Stout student organization which exists to provide you with the tools you need to grow in a personal relationship with God through Jesus Christ and reading the Bible. We're interested in more than the external stuff of life because we know that God has a great plan for each person, even while they're in college. Street Level is here to help put you on the path to knowing who God is and what He has in store for you personally.

College is a big fork in the road where you make a lot of decisions which affect the rest of your life. That's why Street Level is focused on teaching God's way of navigating through life, especially through these years. Being in Street Level provides a chance to learn the Bible, time to hang out with an awesome and diverse group of friends, opportunities to serve students on campus, and chances to be a part of fun trips and retreats. You'll be involved in something real and life-changing instead of just joining the Stout party scene.

College Bible Study

Monday night is the big night for Street Level. We meet on campus in the Cedar/Maple Room in the Student Center at 6:30pm for an organizational meeting. The gang consists of about 30 members and is headed up by Pastor Tom Karl, a Stout graduate who does the teaching at the College Bible Study. The organizational meetings are where we discuss upcoming events which might include hosting a free Friday night concert, planning our annual music festival called Yeshuapolooza, going on retreats, or hang out nights. Then we get updates from the heads of the groups where you can serve in Street Level, such as the Blind Munchies Coffeehouse, our college radio station Jesus Rock Radio 101.7fm, the missions work we do in the Philippines, or our campus magazine called Word on the Street.

The College Bible Study starts at 7:00pm. Pastor Tom teaches the Bible in context, verse by verse, one book at a time, covering about a chapter per week. What you won't find is a lot of religious rhetoric or high and lofty speech. What you will find is practical application teaching that will help you to understand what the Bible has to say and how you can apply that to your daily life right where you're at.

How to Join Street Level

This is the easy part! Street Level has two possible levels of involvement. The first is to become a member. This involves coming to Monday night Bible studies on campus and participating in concerts, outreaches and retreats when you are able. The second level of involvement is coming on board with Street Level Staff. Being a Staff member means volunteering two hours of service time each week in the radio station, the coffeehouse, or the magazine, as well as attending Bible studies and retreats, and serving at concerts and outreaches. There's no pressure to join at either level, so feel free to just attend a few Bible studies, hang out with us at the Blind Munchies Coffeehouse, and get to know who we are and what we're about.

Quotables: Here are a few comments from members and staff about Street Level and our church, Jesus Fellowship.

• One of our favorites is that we've been dubbed the "Hippie Church" by the college students who attend church on Sundays. We haven't really figured out why yet, because none of us are really all that hippie-like, but it might be due to the laid back atmosphere and the come-as-you-are attitude. It could also be that there are a bunch of "long-hairs" here, too.

• Once a month the guys and gals split up to have small group Bible Studies and down-to-earth conversations at a restaurant or someone's house. When we were trying to figure out what to call these get-togethers, an elderly man eating at the restaurant we were in asked us what kind of "motley crew" we were. The name stuck and now the guys group is called Motley Crew, and the girls went for the name-variation, "Molly Crew."

• Here's a quote we've heard from nearly every person when they are asked why they started coming to Street Level's Bible Study: "I just want something more."

Here's some poetry from a new member that sums it up.
"Street Level, that's just what it means, we're on the same level as the cats in the street.

We don't try to preach, or push religion, seek and ye will find that what we teach we're livin'.

Salvation's a free gift, and from our Chief it's given, still don't believe? Come along and see, sit and listen."

CRAZY MENOMONIE-WHAT?

MENOMONIE, WISCONSIN

Menomonie, a city on the Red Cedar River, has been a place people have lived for almost 200 years. Maybe you are new to town and are wondering why on earth people chose to live here. Or maybe you have been a resident of this town for a while and still don't know what this city has to offer. Either way, (mostly for my own curiosity and hopefully yours) we'll take a train ride through this town's history, making stops at interesting points along the way. So come along, this should be a fun ride. "All aboard!"

The Wood Cutters

If you have ever heard that the town was founded on logging, it's true. From around 1820-1901 (when the last log was cut at the Menomonic mill), logging and milling had become the primary source of industry to the community. So much so, that Menomonie had become a company town run by a logging company founded by a group of entrepreneurs named the Knapp, Stout & Co. For 60 years this business ran the logging operations of the area (stretching from Rice Lake to the Mississippi) all from this riverside location.

End of an Era

Skipping ahead a little, the end of milling in town brought new ventures and industries to the area. Brick making, outboard motors, piano manufacturing, and a milk condensary built by an evaporated milk company (later to become Swiss Miss, a ConAgra operation) came to town. One man who rose to the top of influence during this time was James Huff Stout. The son of a lumber baron, he used his wealth and dreams to better the town and community. His biggest legacy we see today is the University of Wisconsin-Stout. Also, as a dreamer of better education and an advocate for city beautification, we can still see the things that he helped further to this day, such as a system of traveling libraries that reached out to the rural communities.

Racing Fever

Another influential person of the day was Harry Miller. Today, he can be considered America's greatest automobile designer. In 1905, he built his first car and in 1916, he built his first racing engine. Throughout the 1920's his cars won numerous races. In fact, they won 73 of the 92 major races held in the U.S. from 1922-1929. One person who really liked these engine designs was Ettore Bugatti, who, after acquiring a Miller engine, took many of the ideas and used them for his own engines. For those who follow foreign cars, Bugatti is the designer that the Bugatti line of cars is named after.

Shoot-out!

In 1931, Menomonie became the victim of organized crime. The Depression was in full swing and so was Prohibition. The target was the Kraft State Bank, located on the 400 block of Main Street. On the morning of October 20th, a car pulled up close to the bank and three men walked into the bank, stealing over $90,000. Upon exiting with two hostages, the getaway car pulled up. The violence that ensued brought a store owner into the fray, along with the security guard who had escaped to the rooftop. The robbers planned well by forming an escape route for their getaway. Unfortunately, two of the robbers and one of the hostages died. The two robbers that got away were eventually captured on another charge (breaking out of prison) and were sent back to prison.

Today's Day and Age

As for today, Menomonie is still bustling. The people here are still just as interesting as those of yesteryear. Take, for example, a Local Cable Access show that was being produced here in town a few years back. Two local high school students decided to start putting together a sketch comedy show. They created some of the funniest and craziest comedy around. The name of the show was Splu Ertaf. Their production group was named Blame Society Films, which is still in production today. Their current productions include a mini Internet show called Chad Vader. This show has gained enough fame to have been featured on the Today Show. You can check out some of their work at www.splu.net.

Young Entrepreneur

Three years ago another high school student decided to look for work at the local skate board shop Board to Death. He soon found himself asking his mother to take out a loan to purchase the business. Over the course of the next three years, business boomed and he moved the shop to a better location accommodate with its growing needs. His success has provided him a full ride scholarship this fall, which he plans on taking this fall. Unfortunately, he won't be able to continue running the business in addition to going to school, but he does plan on selling the shop to some local prospects. No worries to the boarders in town, the shop will stay.

Family Tradition

As for one of the pizza places in town, it happens to be a family tradition. I am speaking of none other than Ted's. It started with the Gounaikis family moving from Greece to the upper Midwest. The name Ted's actually comes from an uncle who opened a pizza place in Duluth. Later, the owners parents moved to Northfield, Minnesota. Shortly thereafter, the family started opening pizza places around the area. Another uncle opened shop in River Falls, Wisconsin, and named it Steve's. The same owner opened the Menomonie shop, and another family member opened one in Owatonna, Minnesota. One nice feature of these family-owned restaurants is that they have virtually the same menu, so from Steve's to Ted's you basically know that you are getting a Gounaikis family tradition. Also, no tradition is greater than this family's unique Greek cuisine. Nowhere else in town will you be able to get their famous Greek special topped with feta cheese.

What Else?

Menomonie seems to be an ever-changing community and there are many events and activities you can get involved with. As for checking out the local fanfare of activities, I would suggest looking at what the Chamber of Commerce has for tourist info. Try the Mabel Tainter for theater productions or go on a self-guided tour. Historic Wilson Place and the Dunn County Historical Museum (at Wakanda Park) have a lot to offer also. Even talking to people can get you quite far in learning the history of this historic town. So go ahead, take your own train ride through the history of Menomonie. I am sure it will be well worth it. Don't take my word for it, though, check it out for yourself.

The Search for Church

Beginning your new life in college will be an exciting time of new responsibilities and difficult decisions. Among these decisions will be the choice of attending church or not, and if so, where? Frequently, this issue is disregarded altogether, but before you plunge into the academic side of your post high school experience you might want to think about testing the waters on the spiritual side. We will highlight the importance of finding and becoming part of a healthy local fellowship.

Why should I go?

You may soon discover that this decision will be an easy one to avoid due to the fact that there may be little or no reason to attend church. Let's face it, getting up extra early after a long Saturday night isn't always first on the list of Sunday morning priorities. So, what exactly are the reasons why you should want to go to church? First and foremost is the idea that God is pleased when people who believe in Him spend time with each other learning about His Word, worshipping and praying together, and working side-by-side for the Kingdom of God, using the opportunities to serve and give to others. The Bible tells us that "iron sharpens iron" (Proverbs 27:17). This introduces us to the concept that Christians serve to make each other stronger and of greater benefit by providing one another with accountability, encouragement, correction, and insight. We are to be an inspiration to each other and an example by proximity. Hebrews 10:24 says, "Think of ways to encourage one another to outbursts of love and good deeds." This simply cannot happen when Christians neglect to come to their local church. People go to church to worship God and hang out with other believers and to share their joy and new life with others.

What does a healthy church look like?

A healthy church will be well organized and in order. This doesn't mean that all of the window sills will always be properly dusted and the hymnals found in their place. Organization in the church simply means that it has a vision or a purpose and the leaders of the church have a means to see that vision to completion. Some questions to ask yourself: Is there more to this church than just a Sunday service? Could I get involved around here? Is this church reaching out to various groups in the community, or does all of its energy seem to be spent on itself?

Another observable aspect of a healthy fellowship is the "fruit" that is produced by it, or in other words, the evidence of God's presence in the motivation, efforts, and results of that ministry. This is what happens in a church where teaching the Bible and following what it says are a major part of their beliefs. The telltale signs that we should look for in an individual or a fellowship are listed in Galatians 5:22, 23 and include love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, and self-control. If these elements are not present in the church that you are considering you might want to note this as a "caution flag" of sorts. It is made clear in the Bible that the things happening on the inside will be made manifest on the outside. Matthew 15:18 says, "Evil words come from an evil heart and defile the person who says them."

Let's face it, though, people can be good actors at times and this doesn't exclude those within the church. Getting a good idea of the fruit a fellowship is producing can take some time. Anybody can have a bad day and leave you with a negative first impression, but often, with some time and patience, you will soon learn that first impressions are often false impressions. On the contrary, anyone can give a wholesome appearance initially, but over the course of time you may come to see that the smiling face and the holy demeanor was only a facade. In the Bible, Jesus rebuked a large group of individuals for this very thing in Matthew 23: 27,28 saying, Hypocrites! You are like whitewashed tombs; beautiful on the outside but filled on the inside with dead people's bones and all sorts of impurity. You try to look like upright people outwardly, but inside your hearts are filled with hypocrisy and lawlessness.

Be careful of making a quick judgment of the fellowship you wish to attend. Give yourself plenty of time to make a good evaluation. If you aren't sure how to identify a fruit tree by its leaves, your safest bet is to wait until fruit is produced to truly see what kind of tree it really is.

What does an unhealthy church look like?

While finding a healthy church may seem to be rather difficult at times, finding a disjointed fellowship unfortunately isn't so tall an order. The New Testament has much to say concerning the establishment and maintenance of a local fellowship, which many modern churches are apt to change or ignore altogether. The only way that you will know whether or not your prospective church is biblically sound, of course, is to know the Bible for yourself. Recognizing proper biblical order within the church may be a difficult task for a new believer or one who isn't too confident in their knowledge of scripture. Easier, perhaps, than identifying the flaws within the operation of a church, would be to identify the flaws in what is being taught, or in the way it is being taught. This, of course, will again demand that you have some knowledge of what is taught in scripture, but even an elementary understanding of the basic concepts in scripture will help you to determine what kind of a church you might be attending. There is a church in Menomonie, for example, which belongs to a major denomination that does not believe Jesus was resurrected after His crucifixion. The Bible, however, reports otherwise. One doesn't need to be a biblical scholar to see the error in that doctrine. The Apostle Paul writes to the church in the city of Corinth and says,

Why are some of you saying there will be no resurrection of the dead? If there is no resurrection of the dead, then Christ has not been raised either. And if Christ was not raised, then all our preaching is useless, and your trust in God is useless. And we would all be lying about God, for we have said that God raised Christ from the grave, but that can't be true if there is no resurrection of the dead. If there is no resurrection of the dead, then Christ has not been raised. And if Christ has not been raised, then your faith is useless, and you are still under condemnation for your sins. In that case, all who have died believing in Christ have perished! And if we have hope in Christ only for this life, we are the most miserable people in the world. I Cor 15:12-20 (paraphrased)

Many people today are going to church only as long as the messages from the pulpit are non-offensive (if the Bible is included at all). Many people are more interested in being entertained at church than they are in learning the truth about themselves and God. Be very careful of this. For this reason, the Bible is sometimes not even taught or explained, but instead gets replaced with stories. In contrast to the fruit of a healthy fellowship, these churches fail to help their people grow and mature into strong Christians.

There is a major movement within the modern church that seems to be gaining popularity. It has been labeled as the "Emergent Church," and the leaders of this movement seem to place little emphasis on holding to the truth, but seem to focus more on the feelings or the experience of the church setting. Instead of the focus of the service being on the Word of God, there is a great effort to create a mood that makes a person feel close to God. The lights are often dimmed in order to create the desired atmosphere. Candles are often used, and video projectors may be utilized to flash images across a screen onstage. Anything that may be used to enhance the experience of the worshipper is a possibility: DJ's with turntables, interpretive dancers, a prayer labyrinth. The major characteristic of this movement is the falling away from the simple truth of Jesus as found in the Bible, oftentimes adding information about Him that isn't there, and/or taking away crucial information that is. Churches of this kind fail to see the importance of scripture, and the result is that they adapt to the culture around them instead of influencing it. According to Spencer Burke, an advocate of the Emergent Church, and former pastor of a mega-church in Irvine, CA, "Rather than force people to fall into line, (this new movement) tolerates differences and treats people who hold opposing views with great dignity. To me (Burke), that's the essence of the emerging church."

One need only to look into scripture to find that mankind has always, in spite of God's forbiddance, adopted popular cultural practices into the true and practical worship God has always desired. Though it is true that we live in an ever-changing, postmodern culture, it's a chilling revelation that the human heart is still as rebellious and assuming as it was in the beginning. If Jesus rebuked others for seeking after a miracle in order that their faith might be confirmed by the things they saw, felt, and experienced (Mt 16:1-4), what will be our excuse if we do the same? Why should it be that the atmosphere, the music, the mood, and the look of the service should take the place of the teaching and obeying of the truth of the Word of God?

It is important to be mindful of the characteristics of a healthy church and the pitfalls to avoid in finding one. We hope the information presented here will be of help in your search for a great fellowship. For more information concerning this topic, listen to the insightful teachings of Allistair Begg, available on the Street Level Website: www.streetlevel.uwstout.edu.

the memories worth running for

also dropped money into the basket until the Methodist church started asking for the families to be more giving. That's when we stopped attending. I was seven and still reeling from my unfortunate experience, so I started going with my grandmother to her Lutheran church because, as Grandpa said, "It's necessary for a child to know God and Luther had it right." I bounced my way through a couple of churches between the ages of seven and twelve and ended up doing what most pre-teens do during a sermon, twiddling my thumbs, closely watching the clock, and dozing off every once in a while. By 14, though, I had stopped attending a regular service all together, believing that I just wasn't wanted anywhere. During puberty, I slipped into a quiet place that was dark and soft, where no one but I tread.

My head filled with dark thoughts and my dreams overflowed with blood and gore, generally my own. I was like this when I graduated high school, but I put on a very smiley front. I went through my first semester of college like this as well. However, something changed in my second semester. I took a class called Religions 100 with Professor Steve Spina at UW-Eau Claire. There were only a few assignments in the class and one of them was to attend a religious ritual: a marriage, a church service, a yoga class, or whatever. One of my friends had been badgering me to go to church with her so I figured, what the hay, might as well kill two birds with one stone: get the rid of the badgering friend and do the assignment. I was wrong. I did the assignment, but I kept going to this odd church where people weren't afraid to make weird faces and actually talked to each

"One of my friends had been badgering me to go to church with her so I figured, what the hay, two birds with one stone: get rid of the badgering friend and do the assignment."

I was born odd, which has led me to believe that everything in my life will be odd. This has been affirmed right down to the smallest details, such as how I like my coffee (I don't), how I like to wear toe socks (in pink), and how I first came to church.

It's safe to say I was an unlucky little child. I know now that it's not uncommon, which is terrible to say, but I was molested by a babysitter when I was six. This was the start of a complete shutdown in which I forgot much of my childhood from birth until the age of 14. I was born into a "Christian" family and we went to church every Sunday. We other. They said "Amen!" during service and actually held Bibles, flipping through them to see if what the pastor was teaching was true. Oh, and there was no collection basket to drive a person away.

Then something odd happened. I started to believe in God and his Son, even though I was already a Christian according to America's definition of Christianity (born into a Christian family, therefore you are a Christian). Oddly enough, I actually started to believe that even though I wasn't good enough, God still loved me so much that He sent his Son to be crucified for me. So, on March 27, 2005, I became one of those crazy born-agains, who smile for no apparent reason and make funny faces during church. I am also one who has never been surrounded by a more loving family than the one I have now. It's kind of funny in an odd way that when you behold my church family, you'll see piercings and tattoos, smokers, ex-drug addicts, ex-alcoholics, and unwed mothers, but the only frown you see is someone thinking too hard, or someone who still lives in that dark place where no light shines. It's never too late, and you're never alone. Let peace be with whoever takes heart in this. Come in for a visit, and stay for awhile. I did, and I've never been better.

Menomonic "Bobs"

In an effort to acquaint you with the town, we've decided to help start you off on getting to know people who work in Menomonic. Of course, there are many people to choose from so we suggest that you get out there and meet people yourself as well. This might seem like a lot of work, but hopefully the conversations will pay off and then you can proudly say, "I met someone new today!" without actually lying. So it won't seem like we are throwing you to the wolves, we started with some of the local "Bobs" around town, and from what I can tell, all are very interesting.

Robert "Rebob" Weidner

In 1970, Weidner moved to Durand, where he still resides. He moved to start out as a DJ for the local daytime AM station WRDN (which, after a sale and a move, is the local "95 on the River"). Because of some programming choices by the radio station and its move to FM, Robert decided to look for work elsewhere. He did a 15 year stint re-treading tires and then went back to radio work for about a year or so, but, it seems he was still looking for something fulfilling. He had taken a postal workers' examination around this same time and found that the U.S. Government wanted him. He answered the call in 1987 and hasn't looked back since. If you are wondering, he took the name "Rebob" because there were so many Bobs working at the same post office already. Although, I like to think it has something to do with the old joke, "Pete and Repeat were in a boat..." If I'm wrong, sorry Bob. Regardless, Robert is one of your local postal clerks at the Menomonic Post Office.

Bob "Mopar" Dodge

Bob started working at the UW-Superior campus in 1980. With a transfer to UW-Stout in 1983, his interest in tinkering landed him a job as a Buildings and Grounds Superintendent. His nickname basically states that he loves cars and he has a lot of trophies to make this point clear. Mopar is short for motor parts. It's a name given to the automobile parts and service group of the Chrysler Corp. and is especially used around muscle car groups where those parts have worked together to rev many an engine. So, when you see this busy man around campus, say hi, or even thank him for keeping the lights on for ya. When it comes to Mopar/Dodge auto parts, I'm sure he can answer a few questions about that too. In fact, I'm sure he would even try to help out as best as possible to answer any question about his job, such as recycling, department moves, or replacing consumables or cars (which get him to work).

Robert "Bob" Giede

The year 1970 also brought Bob Giede to the Menomonic area. He enrolled at UW-Stout and was actually planning on becoming a high school shop teacher. During his time at Stout, he took an art metals course and soon found a love for jewelry art. In 1976, he opened his first shop between The Pub and The Marion on Broadway (which is now a parking lot). In 1990, he began building his current store on South Broadway. He currently designs and manufactures custom-made rings, pendants, earrings, and pins. He has won awards throughout the world, and you too could be a proud owner of some of his work. As for other media, it seems that Bob also dabbles in chainsaw art. His store is located at 2321 South Broadway and you can check out his website at: <http://giedesign.com/>.

Ask Steve

Top 10 Reasons NOT to call Steve at the Help Desk:

1. "My aunt told me that magnets can help with her back problems. My computer is not working well, so I thought, 'Hey, I'll put them on my computer.' Now my computer won't boot! Did I do something wrong?"

2. "For some reason, when I stick my credit card in the slot in my laptop that says, 'PC Card,' it does not recognize it and I can't pay for my stuff at Amazon. Also, I don't use 'PC Card,' I use 'MasterCard®!'"

3. "I was bored with the color of my keys on my keyboard so I painted them different colors, but when I closed my screen, the paint stuck to it. So I got some paper towels, soaked them with gasoline (my dad said gasoline will clean up any mess), and wiped it on the screen, but now I can't read my email."

4. "I have a Radio Shack computer that I inherited from my uncle and it's really sweet. I'm having trouble installing World of Warcraft, though. When I insert the CD-Rom into the slot that says 'Floppy' something, I hear a terrible grinding sound. Any ideas?"

5. "The keys on my keyboard were too loud, so I sprayed them down with WD-40 and now when I press the 'Enter' key, it types 'qqqqwwwwweerrrrr'. What's wrong? Do I have a virus?"

6. "My mom told me I need to get this new screen saver program that has really cute kitties on it. I downloaded it and it asked me something like, 'Do you also want to install "sweet spammer" and "credit card number manager?"' I said yes, and now my computer is running really slow and something's wrong with my credit card."

7. "My computer says, 'Your hard drive is almost full.' I've downloaded 79.9 gigabytes of movies from my friend's dorm 'file server' and now I can't save my Word doc to the desktop. It says it has an 80 gigabyte drive—I don't understand!"

8. "This past summer, I was working on my computer by my parents' swimming pool. My nephew tripped on the power cord and the laptop flew into the pool. For some reason, it won't turn on and I was wondering if you guys could back up my pictures from my Valley Fair trip?"

9. "I found a really good deal at Best Buy for a new hard drive to put in my Stout computer. I tried opening the case on my computer, but it was really difficult. When trying to install the hard drive, I noticed it did not fit. So I took out my jig saw and cut a rectangle in the case by the keyboard. Now my computer does not work at all!!! They are not going to charge me for damage, are they? I mean, it's my right to do whatever I want, right?"

10. "I'm calling from the Boundary Waters on my cell, and I'm trying to access my files on the Stout server. I cannot get a wireless signal here, and I'm mad! I was promised that I could get Internet 'anywhere' with my computer. I want my money back!"

Top 10 Ways to AVOID getting a UW-Stout Parking Ticket:

1. Hoof it. Use those feet or ride a bike. Think exercise. Yeah, that's it.
2. Fork out the dough for a parking permit and make sure it's always in clear view.
3. Plug a meter. (No, Canadian coins do not work.) Drop in an extra coin for those times when your professor talks on and on and on...
4. Lock your car! Parking permits are a hot commodity, so protect against sticky fingers.
5. A broken meter does NOT equal a free meter. Sorry, even if it's broken or fails to work, you will get a ticket if you park there.
6. Learn to read. Those signs they put in the lots aren't there to just look pretty.
7. Visitors are people too. Go to Parking Services before your visitors come and get them a temporary permit. You could even get them a roll of coins to use to make them feel special.
8. Emergency flashers don't mean you can park wherever you want to. Apparently, the parking laws don't cancel out the second you put your flashers on—a prohibited area will always be prohibited.

Ask Deb

9. "They" don't know anything. The following are not viable excuses: "They said I could park here," or "They didn't tell me..."

10. Visit the Parking Office website at www.uwstout.edu/parking or call 232-1792 and say hi to Deb!

THE BLIND MUNCHIES
COFFEEHOUSE

Music Review

.:IN OVERFLOW:. - concert Acoustic/Urban Rock/Alternative

In only their third show as a band, In Overflow brought their "A" game to the Blind Munchies

Coffeehouse last spring. Featuring a banjo, an upright bass, and even some tambourine, their sound is definitely unique. It has been said that live music is better than the studio versions of the same songs and that couldn't have been proven better than what was done by Zac, Karin, Mitch, Rob, Grahame, and Marc.

In such a small venue, the band was able to feed off the electric vibe of the crowd, making their performance excellent. The quaint coffeehouse by day is turned into a totally different scene for concerts. With a funky stage setup and incense and candles burning, the Blind Munchies becomes an entirely different place. In Overflow's song set started off with an unforgettable banjo twang and only got better from there. "Not Meant For Keeping" and "My Worrying Mind" are some of their best work and really exhibit the wide array of instruments they have. The lyrics and story construction in between songs was interesting and unique; these guys really have a heart for the Lord and it shows. If you are looking to hear more from them, check out all the tracks heard at the show by buying their first CD, The Time Is Now, from either iTunes or their website: www.myspace.com/inoverflow.

6 Live Bands ■ Hog Roast ■ Henna Tattoos
Full-on Coffeehouse ■ Live Radio Interviews

This year's Yeshuapoolooza is looking to be one of the best to date, featuring an amazing lineup of awesome bands that played at the Blind Munchies Coffeehouse this last year. The line-up includes: Runway 36, This is Luke, In Overflow, and Tom Feldmann. This year, we are fortunate enough to hold the festival right on UW Stout's grounds and we plan to rock the tent. If you don't already know what these bands sound like, This Is Luke (Powerpop/Indie) is a little reminiscent of the band Taking Back Sunday.

Check out "Color Me Bitter" for a good idea what to expect. Runway 36 (Alt/Rock) is all about the keytar, man. You have to hear it to know what I mean. Tom Feldmann (Americana/Roots) is back again to burn down the house with some steel guitar. In Overflow (Urban Rock) also has their own flavor to bring to the table. They have captured the urban folk rock sound to a tee and they sound downright awesome. Lead vocals are reminiscent of the band "Live". If these descriptions don't do enough for you or you haven't had the pleasure of hearing any of these bands, check out their MySpace pages. Besides having awesome bands for your listening pleasure, there are also various other things at the festival. We serve food, sell band merchandise, jewelry, sarongs and even have henna tattoo artists. This year it's right on campus.

Movie Reviews

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles
Action/Comedy
Rating: PG
Rent at: Mr. Movies (eventually)

The Turtles return from a 14 year break to the silver screen with a fairly decent showing. At first, one may be skeptical of the animation and how it will affect the goings on of the turtles, but rest assured, the same humor and classic "Turtles feel" is back at it once again. The story starts with the lore of the ghost of the forest. A small village deep in the jungle is forced to pay protection money to a group of local thugs. Luckily, Leonardo is in the area as Splinter has sent him away to train in leadership skills. Back home in NYC, the three remaining turtles have had to pick up jobs in Leo's stead to keep themselves occupied. Donatello works as an over-the-phone computer repair man, Michelangelo works as basically a circus clown (turtle) who goes to kid's parties and gets beat up by crazy young kids, and Raphael does the only thing he feels like doing—vigilante work under the cover of darkness.

TMNT goes about its business much in the same way that the previous Turtles movies did. Enter stage left the bad guys. Enter stage right the turtles. The brothers have to learn once again to feed off each others strengths and beat their fairly substantial (as in invincible) enemy together.

The soundtrack is pretty decent. (However, this review may be a bit partial to it because of the inclusion of the "Whoa Black Betty" song during one of the fights.) Other than that, look for a few of the same kind of quotes from the old movies with some a bit more tongue in cheek. Lines such as, "Two minutes for high sticking," and "You sure know how to show a lady a good time," were quite funny. To sum it all up, a twenty-something girl exiting the theater commented, "I don't care how old I get. I will never be too old for that." End result: rent this movie, maybe even buy it.

Movie Previews

The Simpsons The Movie

Hype Rating: 4/5 Stars
Genre: Animation/Comedy
<http://www.simpsonsmovie.com>

The whole crew from the Simpsons TV show is coming will be on the big screen by the time you read this. Maggie, Bart, Lisa, Homer... you get the idea. In what looks to be a direct animation port you should be in for a treat as much of the same humor prevails because it was written by 11 of the show's best writers. As Homer chokes Bart on the roof during one scene and says, "I'll teach you to laugh at something that is funny," we can see that Bart and Homer haven't changed one bit from the show and are bound to have more than a few father-son interactions of the same kind.

Transformers

Hype Rating: 3/5 Stars
<http://www.transformersmovie.com>

You've seen the previews, you've felt the hype. If you haven't, you must not know what television is. In 2003, a supposedly crash-landed Mars Rover sent one last transmission, which included a giant robot smashing it. This information was never released to the public. Present day: the robots land on earth and begin to wreak havoc. As a childhood favorite of many comes to the big screen this summer, the question is posed: just who will win—the Autobots or Decepticons? (Don't be fooled—when dealing with robots of this scale, humans are sure to be a non-factor.)

STREET LEVEL GOES TO CORNERSTONE FESTIVAL - 2007

That's right, 22 folks from Street Level Ministries headed down to Bushnell, Illinois, again this summer for the biggest, craziest Christian music festival around—CORNERSTONE!! As one of our biggest yearly events, Cornerstone Festival becomes a boxing ring for faith and discipleship. We grow closer as friends and learn to minister to each other and those walking by. This trip not only blesses our friends in foreign lands with financial help, but it's also a missions training camp as we intend to take short-term missions trips to the Philippines in the years to come.

In Blind Munchies Coffeehouse style, we brewed up some killer coffee and a ton of espresso, sold cookies, biscotti, purses, jewelry, and sarongs. To top it all off, all of the proceeds go to the construction of a church in Kanakote, India. Here are some highlights as well as some comments from the group:

"I thoroughly enjoyed going to Cornerstone. It was my first time and it was pretty amazing to hang out with an awesome group of people from Jesus Fellowship Church and serve as well as grow closer as a group through seeing and experiencing what the Lord had all planned out for us. It was exciting to see thousands of other Christians in one place, sharing their love for Jesus and appreciation for music and worship. There are so many great memories I wouldn't even know where to start talking about them all. One memory that sticks out would be when we were getting customers of the coffeehouse to put on the sweet "required" Tinkerbell and Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle sunglasses to place their order. I think all of us serving and all of the people being served got a kick out of it." -Kelly

"C-Stone really helps you learn to work with people that you never imagined working with. God puts a team together (one that has all sorts of people) and we get the chance to serve God in this awesome way. The most awesome part is knowing that when I get to heaven, God will show me how the work we all did affected all those that we're trying to raise the money for. It's the Butterfly Effect on a grander scale." -Mandie

"My favorite thing about Cornerstone was realizing that the smallest opportunities to talk to someone can have giant results. I saw a girl last year wanting to go up to the mosh pit, so I asked her dad if I could take her up there. He said yes, despite my foot tall mohawk. She was a great lil' gal that had a huge heart for Jesus. She came back this year and was looking for me. Having her tell me what a huge impact that small gesture made last year really made me think about the small things and how miniscule events in our lives can have lasting impact in others lives. I now email back and forth with her and get to hear all about her growing up, both chronologically and physically. Realizing that we should never overlook the smallest chance to make someone's day and have real love for them, like Jesus did, really affected me." -Angie

"This year was my first year at Cornerstone. I had been hearing about it for the last couple of years, but I didn't really expect to see the things that were told to me. When we got there, I was sort of surprised to see tents everywhere. I mean, I was expecting it, but then seeing it first hand kind of threw me for a loop. There were people everywhere. In many spots it was like a busy midway area of a county fair. The next day, reality hit when we walked two miles to the showers, only to get turned down because there was no water being supplied. However, this did give us a chance to walk around the grounds a little more. One last thing, it was really cool to see the interactions of our coffeehouse group. We had such a tight knit group that it seemed we could do almost anything. The only reason we were doing anything was because of God, though. Later on in the trip, it seemed like everything in our coffeehouse was breaking down. We made do with what we had, and everyone kept their spirits up, even when our line at the main stage was 40-50 people long. God pulled through (like He wasn't going to) and we made about the same amount of money that we had made the year before. Overall, it was great. -Nate

EXTREME RAMEN

A Tribute to the Late Ramen Noodle Inventor, Momofuku Ando

In light of Momofuku Ando's death this past January, we at WOTS have decided to forgo our usual funky Ramen recipes. Instead, we bring you "Extreme Ramen." This is Ramen like you've never seen it before! Since Ramen is so great to eat, we figured it's got to be great for other things too. Check out our creations below and have fun experimenting on your own with really old packets or flavors you don't like. It gives you an excuse to use glue again.

Ramen Picture Frame and Ramen Bangle Bracelets

- Cook the noodles in boiling water for three minutes.
- Strain the noodles and rinse thoroughly with cold water.
- Pour noodles into a bowl and mix in approx. 1 tbsp. Elmer's glue.
- Form your frame or your bracelet by stretching the noodles and then bunching them together in the desired shape onto a greased cookie sheet.
- Apply a little more glue to the top of your creation.
- Heat in oven on warm for several hours. (Why? See tip 2 below.)
- Decorate with food coloring or acrylic paint.

Some tips to keep in mind when embarking on a project like this:

1. Cats and/or dogs like to eat your "creations."
2. Ramen likes to grow mold fairly quickly when left out on the counter.
3. Go ahead and enjoy a noodle here and there as you're making your project. Just try and do it before you mix the glue in.

FREE GIVEAWAY: Don't miss out on this! At Yeshuapoolooza on September 8th, Street Level will be giving away a giant brick of Ramen in honor of Momofuku Ando. Be sure to check it out!

8 Great Websites to Check Out...

1. www.howstuffworks.com

Have you ever wondered what's actually going on inside your car or what happens during a power outage? From health to science to culture, this website does a great job of getting down to the nitty gritty and explaining the inner workings of pretty much everything. I recently learned how my car's engine works because the site broke it down into a really easy-to-understand manner, complete with animations of how the parts function.

2. www.coolsiteoftheday.com

True to its name, this site features a new website every day, complete with a "coolness" rating. They come up with some pretty interesting and random features well worth checking out. They even have an archive of past sites from previous years. I was impressed by the diversity of the sites they found and thought the rating scale was also helpful.

3. www.magneticpoetry.com

If you find yourself lacking the fridge space for real magnetic poetry, this is the easy answer. You can choose from a variety of themed magnetic poetry kits and create your own poems online. I used the children's "Storymaker" kit and came up with this masterpiece: "My mom throws the pig very softly through the woods on a sunny day." Nice.

4. www.despair.com/viewall.html

You've probably noticed the inspirational posters that hang in schools and offices across America with words such as ACHIEVEMENT written across them with a picture of someone climbing Mount Everest and a motivational phrase written across the bottom. This website won't give you any warm fuzzy feelings like those. This site features "De-motivators," basically spoofs on inspirational wall art. Their slogan is "Demotivators: increasing success by lowering expectations." Some of my favorites are: "CLUELESSNESS—There are no stupid questions, but there are a lot of inquisitive idiots" and "CONSISTENCY—It's only a virtue if you're not a screwup." If you need a fix of sarcasm, check this out for a good laugh.

5. www.youtube.com

Everyone knows about YouTube, the site where any random person can add their own videos and watch other videos for free. It provides a huge database of eclectic videos that would have otherwise gone unappreciated. Here are some new videos to check out:

- Type in "Best Break Dance Moves Vol. 1" (They have volumes 1-3. It's amazing what these people can do!)
- Search for "60 Minutes Brain Man Part 1" and "60 Minutes Brain Man Part 2." This is a clip about the amazing savant, Daniel Tammet, who recently spent over five hours reciting the number pi to over 22,500 decimal places. This interview delves into the way his amazing brain works—he sees number sequences as colors, textures, and landscapes. It's fascinating!

6. www.homestarrunner.com

This site has tons of cartoons and games featuring some zany characters and plenty of ridiculous humor.
<http://www.homestarrunner.com/2manyknives.html>

7. www.theonion.com/content/index

The Onion News is "America's finest source" for wacky, sarcastic parody news. They take top stories and put their own twist on them with hilarious results. Here's an example of a headline to whet your tastebuds:

Al Gore Caught Warming Globe to Increase Box Office Profits
"Dozens of eyewitness reports indicated that former vice president Al Gore deliberately attempted to raise the earth's temperature with a fire hose in order to boost box office receipts for 'An Inconvenient Truth,' his documentary film about global warming that was released in May."

8. www.veryfunnyads.com

Here you can find the funniest recently featured ads. The ads come from countries all around the world, and let me tell you, you haven't seen anything as bizarre as some of these foreign ads. Kind of makes you feel normal.

EXTREME IRONING

Are you bored with normal ironing? Are you sick of de-wrinkling and trying to get that crease out in everyday locales? Is the idea of ironing like a 1950's American woman not doing it for you? I am here to say that there is still hope for your pressing life. Worry no longer: Extreme Ironing is here! Invented as a past-time for those people who prefer to do things on the edge, extreme ironing is for those who iron, to the extreme. Whether your favorite thing is biking, skateboarding, bungee jumping, or rock climbing, the idea is that you get some ironing done along with your favorite sport. Mostly, the goal is to just get a crazy picture of yourself with an ironing board, iron in hand, and an article of clothing while doing something you like. If you don't like ironing that much, but would rather watch extreme ironing in action, then just check out <http://www.extremeironing.com> and see what other people do while ironing. YouTube has some fun videos also if you do a search for extreme ironing.

Disclaimer: Extreme sports can be dangerous and this is also true of ironing. Never assume that an iron is cold enough to handle the hot plate. Always assume that an iron is hot. Also, steam is superheated moisture well above the boiling point so be careful around those gaseous outbursts.

Break out of the Stout Bubble...

Where to find news and stay informed while you are at college:

In our rapidly changing world there is always something new or interesting going on, and it's important to keep up on it as much as you can. Even with a busy lifestyle such as one of a college student, you shouldn't have trouble getting your daily fix with these three easily attainable forms of media:

Internet – It's accessible nearly anywhere and you can pinpoint what news articles interest you. Google and MSNBC provide you with various news categories such as Politics, World News, U.S. News, Business, Sports and Health, just to name a few.

TV – Although time could be an issue as news plays at slotted times of the morning/evening, you won't have to use your frazzled brain to read anything. Evening news from KARE 11 or WCCO 4 provide you with up-to-date news and even gives you the option of online news stories you can view in a similar fashion to YouTube (although the sound quality is pretty choppy) right from your laptop.

Newspaper – What could be better than drinking coffee and trying to look like an intellectual in a coffee shop? Why, reading a newspaper AND drinking coffee, of course. Acoustic Café and Caribou Coffee both provide free newspapers for you to read through at your leisure (Caribou also offers them for sale if you so desire.)
