SURPLUS STORES

There's Treasure In Them Thar Junk Heaps

Ever feel the need buy all red marbles for your Marble Works set? What about 600 feet of Cat 5 cable? No? Maybe then you need to buy a six-pack of baby doll heads. Whatever your fancy, if you are in need of some random junk (or parts for an equipment fix), you just might find it at the Ax-man. To assure you, the sign with the store hours clearly states, "There is no place like this place anywhere near this place so this must be the place."

In business for over 30 years now, Ax-man has been providing the Twin Cities with surplus items in varying forms, from scraps of leather and pill bottles to nose picking protective gloves and even shiny wrapping paper by the foot. Even if these items don't pique your interest, keep your eyes peeled because there is junk a-plenty to be plundered from their shelves. Just inside the store there is a sign that reads, "Get it today because it might not be here tomorrow." You never know what could ship in or not sell and be sent along on its merry way.

Organized in huge cardboard boxes and on shelves, each item has its own special tag which creatively describes it. If you like organization and proper order to things, this might not be the place for you. Ax-man has a friendly, almost inviting sense of the ability to poke, prod, bounce (given the product is a super ball), and maybe even smell before you buy. Shopping there recently proved the store had lots of fun and quirky things to buy. For instance, there was a Mickey Mouse wall chart for your daily chores (essential for the busy college student), Love Candles (sure to make even the most boring of Tuesdays as romantic as your high school prom) and even some of those Creepy Eye Straws that you could get at fast food restaurants years ago. If you can't find exactly what you are looking for in the bin (i.e. the right color), feel free to root around in it until you find do. This store isn't going to rush you out for inspecting their wares to a greater

MABEL TAITER: HISTORY JUST AROUND THE CORNER

"The theater is open daily and provides more than just good performances at night."

The historic Mabel Tainter Theatre was first erected in 1889 in honor of Mabel Tainter (1867-1886) daughter of Captain and Mrs. Andrew Tainter. The Dunville sandstone lends a rustic feel to the outside of the building, but the inside features hand stenciled walls and ceilings, a marble staircase and floors, leaded stained glass windows and brass fixtures, and four fireplaces of varying styles.

As the years passed, the building deteriorated and it became apparent that renovations were inevitable. Restoration started in the 1960's with various things that needed replacing due to improper care from 1939 to 1959. First was the Steere and Turner pipe organ, a new stage curtain, and re-stenciling. In 1998, current plans began to take shape for new renovations involving altered seating (made more comfortable), entirely new handicap accessibility, and new elevators which would open up opportunities for community members who had not been able to access the theater in years. The renovations were completed this past fall. Even with all of these new additions and restorations, the staff at Mabel Tainter feels that the building has still kept its historical draw and integrity.

The Mabel Tainter features an eight month season (October-May) with plays, musicals, and traveling performance groups. For example, the Missoula Children's Theatre, Eau Claire Children's Theater, and Menomonie Theater Guild are all exciting acts booked for this upcoming season. They are doing plays such as Robinson Crusoe, Alexander's Terrible, Horrible No Good Bad Day, and Little Shop of Horrors respectively. Each year, the Menomonie Theater Guild rents out the space and staffs all of their own stagehands for their shows. Usually, Mabel Tainter Theatre's facility manager takes care of stage work and relies on a large base of volunteers to run the theater for stage productions. Volunteers can choose from jobs such as stage hands or box office ticket takers.

The theater is open daily and provides more than just good performances at night. During the day, you can take a self-guided tour (Monday-Friday during regular business hours) and read through the in-depth guide to its history. Also available for your viewing pleasure is an art gallery on the upper level where local artists are featured with varying forms of art media for four to six weeks at a time. And if you are bored of sitting in the student center or library doing your homework, why not check out the lower level of the theater for a quiet and nicely accommodated public room with free coffee and wireless internet access? Check out www.mabeltainter.com for more information.

Mabel Tainter is open to the public for tours and gallery browsing Monday-Friday from 10am-5pm.

Get Your Masala On

Why Cook Indian?

Are you sick of the same old fare? Tired of the bland and pasty dishes of the upper Midwest and the potluck phenomena consisting of noodles and some mystery sauce? Why not tempt your palate with some savory and spicy cuisine from India? Shake off the urge to cook something comfortable and invite a few friends over for an authentic Indian meal. Some friends and I tried it and it turned out to be a blast. Your friends will be impressed and you'll have amazing leftovers! Here's how to get started:

How they do it in India

If you went to an Indian market you'd be awestruck at all of the rich colors and smells. They specialize in spices of every color and variety, and most dishes go by the motto, "The spicier the better." You'd find an array of spices such as coriander, red chilies, turmeric, ginger, cumin and fennel. On trips to India, friends of ours have commented on the rich flavors of the food, which was slow-cooked over an open fire in the village and then served on a banana leaf and eaten with the hands. While certain foods are regional, foods such as basmati rice, bean-based sauces, and curried dishes are common to most parts of India.

How to do it in America

Indian cooking isn't hard if you know how to get started. First, check out the recipe cards in the center of this magazine. Then, invite a few friends (this recipe serves about four) who aren't afraid to try new things. If you're feeling really brave, you can check out a CD from the Stout Library called Indian Music for the Sitar and Surbahar (call number M1808 .164x). Next, grab the ingredients. All of these ingredients can be found at Menomonie Market, which is just two blocks away from Bowman and Harvey Halls. Ask the attendant to help you find the Indian section, which will have the curry paste and basmati rice. Or, if you want the taste without all the work, Lammer's has authentic pre-made Indian food in their organic section with the brand name Paneek Paneer. After all the stuff is bought, you can head to your dorm's kitchen and start chopping!

Pulling it Together

When everything's finished, sit down to enjoy with the music playing in the background and a cup of Darjeeling tea with milk and sugar, which can also be purchased at Menomonie Market. Keep the lights low and if you want to keep it really authentic, you can sit on pillows or cushions on the floor and even attempt to take a few bites with your hands. Just make sure it's your right hand because in India the left hand sometimes doubles as toilet paper. If eating with your fingers isn't your style, try using the naan bread as a utensil to scoop up the food. Serve the curry sauce over the basmati rice and take a second just to smell the different spices before digging in!

Don't feel like cooking?

PSYCHICS, GHOSTS,

"ABRACADABRA, HOCUS-POCUS, MIRROR-MIRROR"

WHAT'S UP WITH PSYCHICS?

America is quickly becoming obsessed with the exploration of a world unfamiliar to those bound to a physical existence. Popular television shows feature "professionals" who are able to "communicate" with the dead while houses and hotels which are purportedly haunted have become tourist traps. For example, the Winchester Mystery House, whose number of annual visitors is kept secret, inspires more fascination and intrigue than Richard Simmons in spandex. Our infatuation with the paranormal has led many to seek the sensational expertise of professional psychics and the thrilling entertainment of magicians in magazine spots, radio shows, and television programs. Fortune-tellers and modern day "seers" enjoy sharing their thoughts with anyone who can afford $3.99 a minute while daytime talk shows boost their ratings with a special appearance from notable psychics like Sylvia Brown, Dr Doreen Virtue, and Rosemary Altea.

Why the explosion of interest concerning our exploration of the subconscious mind and the mysterious world of spirits and ghosts? Is it only sensationalism, or is there something legitimate here that shouldn't be ignored? If it's all a hoax, how could so many people worldwide be fooled? What does the Bible have to say about these issues? Let's take a closer look at some of the players in the realm of psychic activity, and look at the issue from a biblical perspective.

Modern psychics are as hard to find as trees in a jungle. Standing at attention, poised and ready with tarot cards, crystal balls, and charm bracelets, these folks can be traditionally found in the back room of a creepy storefront, behind the beaded curtains. With the advent of technology, however, professional clairvoyance is but a phone call away, and now through the wonders of the Internet, just a few cyber clicks can afford one the opportunity to find all they need to know about their favorite psychic personalities. According to her official website, one of today's most notable psychics Sylvia Browne has "demonstrated her amazing ability to foresee future events." Sylvia Browne is the #1 New York Times best-selling author and world-famous psychic who appears regularly on the Montel Williams Show and Larry King Live, as well as making countless other media and public appearances. She is also the president of the Sylvia Browne Corporation and founder of her own church, the Society of Novus Spirit, which celebrated its 20th anniversary in 2006. Although her credentials may be impressive, her "talent" is subject to much skepticism. Relying more upon the media to establish clientele than her actual ability to predict the future, she appears to be a phony, as several websites reveal information concerning her false claims. Of the 32 testable predictions in 2006, Sylvia Browne got three correct. One anonymous blog post reads, "To me she appears to be an ignorant, low class, coarse, and uneducated broad. What you Americans call 'redneck' or 'trailer trash.' Where did this woman come from? She speaks to people with contempt, she has little patience and even less compassion. That is not my idea of a spiritual person."

IS PREDICTION EVEN POSSIBLE?

The Bible itself proves that God can give a person the ability to foresee future events because it records the many times He chose to do so. These people were called "prophets." The major difference between a prophet of God and one of today's popular psychics is that true prophets were never wrong. A prophet wasn't supposed to go around the country guessing at what God had in store for the future. They only spoke on God's behalf when they were 100% sure. As an added incentive to remain correct, a prophet was supposed to be tested by the people he spoke to and if the things he predicted didn't come true, he would be executed. On that note, author Michael Drosnin says that a comet is going to smash into the earth in 2012 and annihilate all life. Before we get too excited about his prediction, we should also remember that he is delusional enough to also believe that he is, in fact, Michael the Archangel. Maybe you should contact Mr. Drosnin and ask him if he would be willing to bet his life savings on that "fact." After all, what will he need money for after he is annihilated? The reality is that few of these "psychics" are bold enough to stand on their own word. It's much easier to be flippant about the future of someone else's life.

"I CAN SEE DEAD PEOPLE"

Rosemary Altea is another notable figure in the field of modern psychic hoopla who has appeared on numerous national television shows including Oprah, Larry King Live, and Prime Time Live with Diane Sawyer. Standing as the intercessor between the living and the dead she supposedly has the ability to communicate with the deceased. Is it possible that Rosemary Altea is actually seeing and communicating with dead people? It certainly appears that she is seeing something, and thousands of people are convinced, but whether she is correct about whom she speaks with is yet to be determined. As a child, she admittedly heard voices and had visions of people who had died. Threatened by her mother she kept silent about the "strange and menacing faces" that she saw in the dark, but apparently became more vocal about her "visions" once she learned that people would pay money to hear about them. Information about whether or not Rosemary is a fraud is a little more difficult to find, but some believe that her "ability" is nothing more than a technique that could be learned by anyone. She has been deemed illegitimate by none other than popular magician/comedians Penn and Teller. (How ironic that they who have an uncanny ability to deceive through the use of various techniques would so quickly expose someone who does the same; perhaps it is their means of ensuring job security?)

IS THIS A GOOD IDEA?

The Bible gives an account of a woman who had the ability to talk to someone who had died (I Samuel 28), but God forbids this kind of practice. In addition to this, we can't be sure that Rosemary is actually seeing people. Without trying to tarnish Ms. Altea's image, let's not forget that human beings do have a reputation for lying when given proper incentive. Nor should we be ignorant of the fact that demons are talked about often in the Bible, and their entire goal is to deceive. You've got to wonder, if somebody paid Rosemary enough money to find Mother Theresa among the dead, would her face be "strange and menacing?" If the Devil himself can appear as an "angel of light," or be transformed into the appearance of something beautiful or appealing as the Bible says he can (2 Corinthians 11:14), is it possible that he could also appear as my dear old dead "grampa?"

GHOSTS: FRIENDS OR FOES?

Paranormal activity has captured the attention of spiritual sensationalists worldwide. A curiosity with ghosts and spirits that began in some at childhood with the telling of spine-tingling stories around the camp-fire has grown into a full-blown obsession with the paranormal as adults. Employing the use of technology and the expertise of professional "ghost hunters," camera crews take television viewers and ghost enthusiasts through a labyrinth of haunted corridors to capture images of a fluttering curtain or audio samples of radio static, all in hopes of contacting the dead. Though there is a flood of interest in the subject of ghostly spirits, no one can seem to explain why they are here or where they've come from. If they are a lost soul, why are they wearing clothes? Do hats, boots, and suits have souls too? Why are some damned to walk the earth while others are not? Some suggest that it is only those who have suffered wrongful death who come back to earth to haunt. If this is correct, ghosts should not be so difficult to find. According to the Bureau of Justice Statistics, roughly one-third of all homicides annually remain unsolved. That means that the annual influx of damned souls haunting the living increases by 11,000 each and every year. Interestingly enough, the Bible has nothing at all to say of ghosts, but much to say about spirits, demons, and angels. While professional ghost hunters have trouble scraping together video, audio, and photographic evidence that is at best mildly convincing, thousands of people worldwide are seeing things, hearing voices, and being tormented by an unexplainable presence. The fact remains that demons do exist and the Bible explains clearly what they are and why they are here. Dr. Dave Oester is an avid ghost hunter and ordained "minister of God" who claims that demons do not exist at all. At his website he writes, "There are no demons and no demonic creatures; demons are a myth evolved from Western Religious Sects." He goes on to say that demons are supposed to lead the "saved" away from the true light, but the Bible itself suggests something entirely different. Demons do not show partiality in the way that Dr Oester suggests, but will be happy to deceive anyone they can.

A WORD OF CAUTION

The supernatural world is a reality that is greatly misunderstood by many people. It is a world that we are ignorantly pressing into out of curiosity, and many are being hurt because of it. The Internet is loaded with websites dedicated to ghosts and supernatural spirits. A Google search for "paranormal" will render over 26 million hits, and a search for "ghost" will present over 154 million possible web links. The fact is that there are many individuals that have taken interest in what they cannot readily see or understand. Since 1959, the subject of E.V.P. (electric voice phenomena) has become a topic of intrigue and mystery, even inspiring several major motion pictures about the issue. What may initially appear to be fun and innocent can prove to be deadly. There is always a part of us that wants to believe in something unexplainable and mysterious. The simplicity of the truth is rarely enough to titillate our minds, so we seek after something more sensational, more appealing, and more enjoyable. We are even willing at times to remain ignorant of the truth in order to experience the thrill of

HERE'S THE RIDDLE:

The black door gracefully slides back to reveal another that will glide open by my very command. "Open sesame!" slips from my lips before I have the sense of mind to control it. Men and women have their day's wages as well as their small, writhing, screaming bundles of seasoned joy whose begging will never cease. Upon the command of "open sesame," I am greeted by the penguins there, not with waves and nods, but with stares of obligatory desire to help in any way possible as long as it takes them away from this mundane task that was put forth to them by the greater penguin who signs their paycheck. I begin to meander as do the great Mississippi or the ever-so-greater Amazon. Not the dot com, of course. In this great hazy daze that is hunger I find art in boxes, beauty in bags and nostalgia in microwave-safe containers. The penguins stalk me as no penguins stalk in nature, ruining the savory motion of looking longingly at the caloric intake of each lovely box, bag and microwave-safe container. "Too much, too expensive," I whisper. "Just right, you have the savings," my belly whispers back in the noises it tends to make in venues that exhibit these exact characteristics. The floors gleam a hazy off-white, the walls a dark green that makes one think of dark forests. However, the bright lights deny even the paltry imaginings of walking in that same dark forest to vanquish the beast that lurks within my very innards.

Where am I?

Naan- Indian Flatbread

(begin by making this first so it has time to rise)

Prep Time: 30 Minutes

Cook Time: 7 Minutes Ready In: 3 Hours

Yields: 14 servings

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 (.25 ounce) package active dry yeast
- 1 cup warm water
- 1/4 cup white sugar
- 3 tablespoons milk
- 1 egg, beaten 2 teaspoons salt
- 4 1/2 cups bread flour
- 2 teaspoons minced garlic (optional)
- 1/4 cup butter, melted

DIRECTIONS:

1. In a large bowl, dissolve yeast in warm water. Let stand about 10 minutes, until frothy. Stir in sugar, milk, egg, salt, and enough flour to make a soft dough. Knead for 6 to 8 minutes on a lightly floured surface, or until smooth. Place dough in a well oiled bowl, cover with a damp cloth, and set aside to rise. Let it rise 1 hour, until the dough has doubled in volume.
 2. Punch down dough, and knead in garlic. Pinch off small handfuls of dough about the size of a golf ball. Roll into balls, and place on a tray. Cover with a towel, and allow to rise until doubled in size, about 30 minutes.
 3. During the second rising, preheat grill to high heat.
 4. At grill side, roll one ball of dough out into a thin circle. Lightly oil grill. Place dough on grill, and cook for 2 to 3 minutes, or until puffy and lightly browned. Brush uncooked side with butter, and turn over. Brush cooked side with butter, and cook until browned, another 2 to 4 minutes. Remove from grill, and continue the process until all the naan has been prepared.

Punjab, Vishakhapatnam, Hyderabad...

Up until a few months ago, it was doubtful that I could pronounce these names. However, during the fall of 2007, I had the fortune of traveling to India with a small team to connect with some Christian ministries and begin learn a great deal about this wonderfully diverse nation.

To explain what a trip to a foreign nation is, I think, a little like trying to describe a great sci-fi movie—you might get the story right, but the engagement is not merely mental. There are the sights, sounds and other senses that make it an other-worldly experience. India is certainly an otherworldly experience and an overload to the senses.

The visual richness of the countryside and its people has a way of inspiring the most unskilled photographer to produce National Geographic level pictures. The smells of India are vivid. Unregulated exhaust, the popular curried cooking, the sanitation practices, and strong incense throughout make a memorable odor that stays in your belongings for weeks after you return. The traffic of the nation is truly a living organism that lacks discernable order to a Westerner: a flow of jeeps, colorfully decorated buses, motorcycles, farm tractors with wagons of hay, and the ever-present pedestrian. I would challenge anyone to find a truly "secluded" place in India—it is absolutely saturated with people. People are everywhere: the tribal Indian woman whose heritage is distinguished by the arrangement and number of her nose piercings, the tenacious drivers who abandon their three-wheel taxi-style "Autos" along the road to pursue a potential customer on foot, the popcorn vendor making a living along the side of the freeway.

Among my best memories was the day I was able to see first-hand how some work back in the U.S. translated into a church building in a tribal area of southern India. Over the past few years, proceeds from Street Level Ministries' various events went toward supporting church-building projects like this one. This particular site was a few hours away from our hotel in Jeypore via jeep ride. Located in a rural area surrounded by fields, the building was almost entirely concrete with a simple, very durable construction and a more detailed facade typical to an Indian church building. We gathered outside the doors for a dedication of the church. Pastor Tim Dodson (Jesus Fellowship of Believers, Menomonie) gave some words of encouragement and after some time of prayer, the plaque which identified this unique church was unveiled. Moving inside, over 150 people sat on the concrete floor waiting expectantly. Many of the women were wearing colorful traditional dress, while the men were wearing slacks and dress shirts. The children were rambunctious, curious, and smiling. They were sure to give us honor as their guests (more than was due of course), bringing each of us necklaces made of fresh flowers as we sat, a little embarrassingly, at the front of the building in the only chairs.

We listened as the local leaders spoke to everyone gathered, sometimes giving us a few clues in English as to what was being said, although this wasn't necessary. The people's sincerity, love for each other, and passion for the work of the Gospel didn't have to be articulated with words because it was apparent from who they were. The speaking was often interrupted by the drum-driven worship music. As with most Indian events, this was less structured, more impromptu, which made it authentic, personable, and less stoic. It was easy to enjoy myself among these people. Pastor Tom Karl (Street Level Ministries) shared via translator how Street Level had raised money by, among other things, selling coffee at Cornerstone music festival. The memorable statement, "Coffee beans built the walls of this church!" put the work in humorous but clear enough terms. As the sun went down, the lack of electric lighting brought a natural end to the event. People filed out of the building and some stayed back to pray with us for specific needs, the language differences breached by simple gestures and some hopeful intuition. We ended the day by eating rice, dal (think lentil gravy), and chicken as the headlights of our jeeps allowed us to see.

I could not escape thinking of some of the words of Jesus during my travel in India:

"...The harvest is so great, but the workers are so few. So pray to the Lord who is in charge of the harvest; ask him to send out more workers for his fields." (Matthew 9:37, 38)

You do see that the harvest is plentiful then. Varied ways of life and belief is what you find in India, from the state names like Himachal Pradesh (land of Gods and Goddesses) to 40 foot tall idols along the highway. After my trip, I cannot avoid asking that God would continue to raise up more workers for his purposes. Punjab, Vishakhapatnam, Hyderabad. These names are now a little more than just grammatical challenges. Now they are memory keys to the landscapes, smells, and people of India, a place where God is moving and alive.

Sick of feeling like the loser?

For those who enjoyed the movie Bruce Almighty, don't wait to check out Evan Almighty. The recently released comedy is a story about God (Morgan Freeman) contacting Congressman Evan Baxter (Steve Carell), demanding he construct an ark in preparation for a great flood. Evan desires to change the world, as many politicians do, and that's when God shows himself to Evan.

The acting in this movie is a little more real than its sister movie, but it still has its cheesy moments. In one scene, Evan notices things are changing when he tries to shave, but everything grows back within seconds of shaving. The animals in this movie play a big part and are included in some pretty funny scenes, but they are also the reason this movie cost $175 million to make. This movie uses some biblical references ("Make a boat from resinous wood and seal it with tar, inside and out. Then construct decks and stalls throughout its interior." Genesis 6:14), but the character of God adds some not-so-biblical concepts. It might be interesting to read the real story of the flood and the ark, and compare it to the movie. With a decent sound track, mostly classical, and special effects, this movie gets three out of five stars and is recommended if you want to change up your normal movie themes.

DOLLAR TREE STORE FINDS!!!

DEALS SO LOW THAT YOUR MOMMA WOULD BE PROUD!

IT'S THAT CHEAP!

Your local Dollar Tree store has some pretty basic things to offer: cheap cards, cheap soda, cheap laundry soap, and a plethora of unique cheap stuff. It was brought to my attention that there are some cheap, but not so "normal" items there. If you've been having trouble taking your garbage out because of the eye-watering stench, pick yourself up some scented garbage bags. Choose from scents of warm vanilla, rose in bloom, or fresh mountain air.

An icy windshield in the morning drive you nuts? Try the wonderful 9" ice scraper with a mitten. This scraper has prime scraping abilities and the warmth to keep one hand warm while the rest of your frigid body freezes. I was also recently introduced to scented bubbles on my dollar store quest. That's right! These bottles come in packs of three with three different nose-appealing scents. You can enjoy grape, peppermint, and apple. Tempting, I know, but just make sure you understand that this bubble solution is not intended for human consumption.

Let everyone know that it's your day by buying yourself a "My Special Day" ribbon. This ribbon can be nailed on a wall, hung around your neck, or proudly carried in your hand all day long, just as long as everyone knows that it's your day, darn it. So the next time you are bored out of your mind, take a trip to the local uptown Dollar Tree in the strip mall across from Wal-Mart and make your own little adventure.

"I had to leave my name in this world..."

"I will open people's eyes, turn people's heads, and sear the world with my words."

That was a quote I wrote when I was younger. I used to think I had to leave my name in this world and make a difference, but when I found the Lord, I was the one who changed. I wrote quite a bit about love, dreams, and destiny, thinking people would hear my words and it would change the way they thought about life. Really, all I was doing was searching for my purpose, and my true love, but I was looking in the wrong place. I realized it is not about me; it is about the One who made me. He has a plan for me that does not involve my name, rather His, and His name is Jesus Christ. Jesus was my purpose and love all along.

"What baffles me is that He knew I would do all those horrible things, yet He still called out my name."

From 15 to 22, I was a party animal. I drank regularly, smoked marijuana, and tried any drug that was laid in front of me. I took in as much as I could and when the next day rolled around, I did it all over again. I was wearing myself out, working full-time, only to spend all that hard-earned cash on a one-day investment. Not only was I tired, but I was also depressed. Partying eventually caught up with me and I ended up getting a number of DWI's, but I did not stop there. I was also the passenger in a really bad car accident where we flipped and flew out of the car. It took me five, yes, five DWI's and jail time to finally snap out of it. There is no doubt the Lord saved my life more than once. I also should have gotten a year in prison, but I only had to spend a total of about 60 days in jail. Wow! On paper I look really bad, but I can also say the Lord has brought me so far.

During my stay at the lovely, accommodating jails in Wisconsin and Minnesota, I picked up the Bible for the first time. Before then, I went to church occasionally, prayed occasionally, and pondered the big questions of life, but had never picked up the Bible. Immediately, I found myself wrapped up in the word of God with a peace and love I had never known. Even in jail, I was happy because I was not alone. The Lord was with me speaking to me and touching my very soul. I read the New Testament and thought, why stop there, so I read the Old Testament. Now I am reading it again. There are so many words that are unknown by so many souls. I just thank the Lord that He showed them to me and I will keep reading them over and over. What baffles me is that He knew I would do all those horrible things, yet He still called out my name.

If I had not let the Lord take the lead, my life would be utter chaos or finished. Not only did He save my life, but He saved my soul. I am still young and have a lot of years left. I just pray for the strength to do His will and to remember where I came from and where I was going before I met Him. Now I am sober and happier than I have ever been. I still make plenty of mistakes, but Jesus is right beside me picking me up when I fall. The friends and message at Jesus Fellowship of Believers also keeps me going in the right direction: toward God. I used to look at those people with their noses in the Bible, watching preachers on TV, and listening to sermons on the radio. Are they crazy? Did I miss something? Obviously I did. Now I am one of those people and I didn't even like to read at all until I picked up the Bible. It's funny how the Holy Spirit the unknown. We often live by the assumption that seeing is believing, but in an age where dishonesty is as common as dirt and technology has made it possible to digitally manipulate photograph and video, how can we be sure that what we are being fed is edible? If it was possible to prove that the things we've discovered about paranormal activity were true, would that make them harmless? If the Bible is correct in its declarations about the intentions of the devil to deceive human beings, is it possible that we are walking into a baited trap? The information available to us concerning the things of ghosts and spirits is overwhelming. Not all of it is trustworthy, but we must find something we can trust. "Satan cannot outsmart us, for we are very familiar with his evil schemes" II Corinthians 2:11 works. Funny is not the right word; amazing, beautiful, stirring, or magnificent may be more appropriate. I changed that quote to the way it should've been written: "The Lord will open people's eyes, turn people's heads, and sear the world with His words." He definitely opened, turned, and seared me. Thank You Lord, for You made me, You saved me, and You'll raise me to You. What didn't You do?
